Southwest River Trail

Columbia—The largest of three river towns, Columbia is home to museums, antique shops, restaurants, and a beautiful market house. The trail’s southern gateway is the Columbia Crossing River Trails Center, managed by the Susquehanna National Heritage Area for Columbia Borough.

On the waterfront, the trail center has recreation information for the river region, exhibits, and public programs. Visitors also get a close-up look at the 1930 Veterans Memorial Bridge along with the piers of a covered bridge burned in the Civil War to stop a Confederate invasion.

Chickies Rock County Park—At the south end of this 420+ acre park, trail travelers pass through Point Rock Tunnel, an abandoned railroad route carved through 180 feet of solid rock. At the north end of the park you’ll find Chickies Rock towering 220 feet. This vertical quartzite rock. At the north end of the park, trail travelers pass through Point Rock Tunnel, an abandoned railroad route carved through 180 feet of solid rock.

Marietta—Steps from the trail in the river town of Marietta are beautiful historic buildings and many great restaurants, pubs, and shops. Historically, Marietta was known for its canal, lumber yards, and pig iron furnaces. Along the trail is the Musselman-Vesta Iron Furnace Center, the office building for a furnace operation from 1868 to the 1920’s. The building is now managed by Rivertowns PA USA as a public education center about the area’s iron-making heritage.

Conoy Township—Just off the northern reach of the trail are the communities of Bainbridge and Falmouth as well as some scenic views. The scenic James D. Warner Passageway, which takes trail users under the Shocks Mill Railroad Bridge, was constructed by Lancaster County Solid Waste Management Authority. From concept to construction, LCSWMA has been and continues to be a valued partner of the NW River Trail.

Around mile marker nine, the White Cliffs of Conoy offer a unique riverfront moonscape from an old limestone quarry. Beyond the town of Bainbridge, Lancaster Conservancy has created the Falmouth Forest Garden where crops producing native perennials like pawpaws, walnut, and cherry are planted. Views at Conewago Falls, river potholes, and the York Haven Dam await visitors to the trail’s northern trailhead at Falmouth.

East Donegal Township—This section of trail runs through scenic river woodlands and farmland. A long trail section traverses Riverfront Park, a key visitor access point that boasts beautiful views of the Susquehanna. The park offers a large pavilion, playground, boat ramp, and places for picnicking and exploring nature. On the concrete base of the pavilion a beautiful mosaic faces the waterfront.
